◆ Heartwood and Elderflower (Mixed Age) Kindergarten —●

- Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, 8:45am-3pm (September 2025-May 2026)

Our mixed-age early childhood/kindergarten program offers a rich and nurturing experience rooted in Waldorf educational philosophies. Our program engages children in a rhythm that combines open-ended nature play, meaningful work, and creative expression through storytelling, puppet shows, and artistic activities such as watercolor painting, beeswax modeling, and finger-knitting. A formal Circle Time integrates movement, listening skills, rich language immersion, and imaginative development through songs and verse. Ample time is spent immersed in outdoor play, as interacting with the natural world is crucial for the holistic development of young children. This nature immersion fosters creativity, resilience, and a deep connection to the environment, providing unparalleled opportunities for growth and learning.

The kindergarten experience in a Waldorf inspired model is generally a 2-3 year journey. Waldorf-inspired kindergartens focus less on traditional academics and more on the overall development of the child (social, emotional, physical), believing that a strong foundation in these early years will lead to greater academic and personal success later on.

In a world that rushes, the forest slows us down. It invites the child to listen, to wander, to wonder—to learn not by being told, but by doing. Among the trees, children discover their strength and test their courage. With mud on their hands and wind in their hair, they find joy in the simplest things: a stick, a puddle, a hidden path. Give them a childhood in the forest, and you give them roots that run deep.

Nurturing Each Child’s Unique Path —●

Both Heartwood and Elderflower classrooms offer the same rich and nurturing kindergarten experience. We divide the entire kindergarten grade into two learning spaces to keep group sizes small, allowing for more individualized attention, deeper connections, and a calmer, more intentional learning environment. Each class follows the same curriculum and rhythms, guided by loving teachers who work closely together to ensure a shared journey through the year.

Set entirely in an outdoor forest school model, the Kindergarten day runs from 8:45 am to 3:00 pm, including lunch time (lunches brought from home). An after-school/aftercare program is available until 5 pm for those families who are interested.

◆ Grade 1 (Ages 6.5-8)

- Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, 8:45am-3:30pm (September 2025-May 2026)

Grade One marks a significant transition from early childhood’s play-based learning to more structured academic instruction, tailored to align with the developmental stage of six and seven-year-olds. This year is characterized by a gentle introduction to formal education, respecting the child’s emerging capabilities while nurturing their imagination and sense of wonder. The curriculum includes an introduction to the alphabet and basic reading through storytelling, drawing, and writing, which often begins with forming letters as artistic expressions.

Mathematics is introduced through hands-on activities, fostering a concrete understanding of numbers and basic operations. Nature studies, arts, handwork like knitting, and rhythmic activities like music and intentional movement are integral, supporting sensory integration and fine motor skills. The teaching methodology is deeply rooted in storytelling, using fairy tales and nature stories, which serve as vehicles for learning and moral development. This holistic approach aims to engage the child’s head, heart, and hands.

◆ Grade 2/3 (Ages 8-11) —●

- Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, 8:45am-3:30pm (September 2025-May 2026)

In Grade Two, the focus is on deepening the foundational skills introduced in Grade One. The curriculum includes legends and animal fables, which cater to the growing imagination and moral understanding of the students. Reading and writing skills are further developed, with more complex texts and creative writing exercises. Math progresses to include concepts like place value, time, and basic computation with larger numbers.

In Grade Three, there is a noticeable shift to more practical life skills and a deeper connection with the real world. The curriculum covers topics such as farming, shelter building, and fiber arts, reflecting the children’s growing awareness and interest in how things work in their environment. This year includes the study of origin stories and a variety of cultural legends, supporting the development of a moral compass and a sense of history. Throughout these grades, arts, crafts, and movement remain integral, supporting the development of fine motor skills, creativity, and physical coordination. The Waldorf- inspired approach in these grades aims to balance academic learning with artistic and practical activities, fostering a sense of wonder, a strong moral grounding, and a deep connection with the world.

◆ Grade 4/5 (Ages 10-12) —●

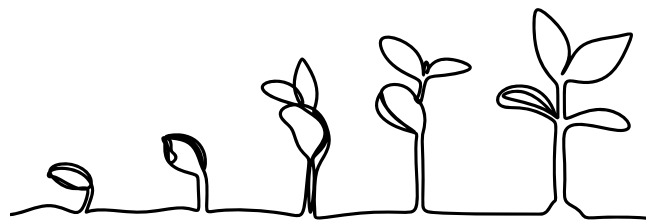

- Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, 8:45am-3pm (September 2024-May 2025)

In Grade Four, we carefully craft a curriculum that supports the developmental journey of children as they grow more aware of themselves and their world. Grade Four invites students to explore the geography, history, and culture of their local environment, thereby nurturing a strong sense of place and belonging. This year also introduces students to the captivating world of Norse mythology, enriching their understanding of heroism, morality, and human nature. Mathematical studies advance to include fractions, long division, and multiplication, with a continued emphasis on practical applications, such as measuring and geometry. The science curriculum brings the animal kingdom into focus, encouraging students to draw connections between humans and animals through detailed studies of characteristics, habitats, and lifestyles. Art and music remain pivotal, with students engaging in complex projects and performances, exploring different materials, techniques, and advancing musical skills.

Balanced and Inspired: The Journey of Grade Five

In Grade Five, we thoughtfully design a curriculum that supports the growing independence and expanding intellect of children as they develop a greater sense of balance and self-awareness. This year marks a transition from the rich, mythical stories of earlier grades to a deeper engagement with history and the evolution of human civilization. Students embark on a journey through the great cultures of India, Persia, Mesopotamia, Egypt, and Greece, exploring the origins of language, governance, and philosophy. This study of ancient civilizations fosters an appreciation for the interconnectedness of human development across time. In Mathematics, students refine their understanding of fractions, decimals, and geometric principles, while Language Arts continues to develop composition, grammar, and literary analysis. Artistic expression remains a vital part of learning, with painting, drawing, and music offering creative ways to engage with academic subjects.

The science curriculum in Grade Five shifts its focus to the plant kingdom, introducing students to the world of Botany. Through careful observation and hands-on exploration, they study the growth patterns, functions, and classifications of plants, tracing the journey from simple mosses and ferns to complex flowering species. Our forest school setting provides an ideal environment for students to engage in gardening, nature journaling, and field studies, deepening their connection to the natural world. Another highlight of the year is the Pentathlon, a cherished Waldorf tradition that brings students together to celebrate the ideals of grace, strength, and fair competition in the spirit of Ancient Greece. Through foot races, javelin throwing, long jump, discus, and more, students embody the harmonious balance between physical skill and inner character. This event is a meaningful rite of passage, reinforcing the values of sportsmanship, perseverance, and beauty in movement.
